Ruben Heuer

My name is Ruben Heuer and I'm a graduate student in the MAPSS program. Until very recently, I have lived in Berlin, Germany, where I worked as a physical therapist for about eight years after studying musicology and German literature. Over the course of my medical career I decided to go back into academia, where I focused on the intersection of cognitive science and medicine. While writing my BA thesis on philosophical implications of a predictive processing perspective on clinical medicine, I dabbled a bit in R and (mostly frequentist) statistics, so I'm really looking forward to intensify my engagement with programming in the future.

When I am not working on my homework assignments I like to...

- playing videogames
- engage in various physical activities, such as...
  - running along Lake Michigan
  - hopefully I'll get back to bouldering soon

This is a picture of myself in Ocean Park, Hongkong, wearing a fashionable panda hat:
